As the fluid or gas travels faster, convective heat transfers increase. VERIFIEDHINT Answer: Basically, heat transfer from a higher temperature of a body to a lower body temperature. Thus, the convection of the air current flows from the earth's mass to the ocean in the northeast direction. Driving is a static process. Make the promise of forward improvement. The liquid and gases are heated by the convection process. For example: in winter, air over the ocean is hot compared to that of the earth's mass. Two types of convection are natural convection and forced convection. Convection provides information on heat transfer between a surface and a fluid or gas in motion. This heat transfer from one body to another can take place in three modes, i.e. driving, convection and radiation. The transfer of energy from one particle to another particle of the body without the actual motion of the particles from their equilibrium positions is called conduction. For example, the heat transfer from one side to another from one solid part takes place through driving. These air convection currents take moisture as they pass over the Bay of Bengal and cause rain in Tamil Nadu. , the heat of the sun reaches the earth through the mode of radiation. These substances are silver, copper, aluminum. Convection: the heat transfer process from one part of the fluid to another by the actual movement of fluid particles is called convection. They can reflect and refract light waves. Note: Among them, radiation is the fastest mode of heat transfer.
